

Dear Sirs,

I work hard as does my wife. We put in sixteen hour days and have two children to raise. The last thing we need, when we come home, is to have some telemarketer soliciting us when come home. The fact that they have our number does not give them the right to call us and force some product on us. We have asked politely to have our names taken off call lists only to have the same solicitors call back days/weeks later.

We need law that speak for us. New Jersey's "Do Not Call" law is that law. It tells telemarketers straight out "we're not interested".

Whatever happened to, "By the people; For the people". I don't recall reading anywhere "By the people; for the special interests".

Please do not overturn New Jersey's "Do Not Call" law. Doing so will be a great disservice to all New Jerseyans alike.

Thank you.
